

CALL FOR RESEARCH PROJECTS

The Smithsonian Institution and Yale University invite faculty and researchers of both institutions to propose collaborative research projects in the arts and sciences to support research internships for undergraduate and graduate students in 2019.

Eligible projects must include:

- 1 research scholar (faculty, researchers, curators, and other scholarly staff) from Yale and 1 research scholar from the Smithsonian; and
- a defined student project that can take place at Yale (New Haven, CT), at the Smithsonian (in Washington, D.C. or another Smithsonian site), or in both locations;

To submit a proposal, please email the following to yale.si@yale.edu no later than November 30, 2018:

- Project description (no more than 300 words);
- Letter, with names, titles, and signatures of research scholars from both institutions, stating a shared commitment to the project;
- Timeline for the project, including student time commitment (recommended 6-8 weeks during the summer or the equivalent spread throughout an academic year);
- Learning objectives for undergraduate/graduate student; and
- Amount of funding requested for the research intern.

Projects will be reviewed by the Yale-Smithsonian Advisory Committee and proposals will receive support notification before the Winter Break (December, 2018). Up to ten internship positions are anticipated to be approved. If approved, project proposals will be posted and opened for student applications in early 2019. Applications will be due in mid-February 2019 with awards announced in March 2019.
